Pen Stealers

To all those memoboard penstealers: Nobody trusts you. Besides not understanding your reasoning, I do not trust you. If you do not respect something as lowly as a memoboard pen, how can we trust you with the new furniture in the dorms, the new real pens, you can easily steal and vandalize campus material and beauty. Please ways or change your ways.

My editorial comment is concerning a growing popular topic. I have managed to accidentally overhear numerous times in the past few weeks. We all know what I'm talking about - the commuter lab.

I am outraged at the very idea of a commuter lab. Experimenting on commuters? That's sick, and should not be allowed in this day and age. I am outraged at the use of laboratory animals in the year of our

What type of experiments could they be conducting in this covert commuter lab? I think an immediate and thorough investigation should be launched against an administration that would condone this activity. This isn't a horror movie! It's a temporary measure and these people are real people. Think about it. I am outraged at the use of a Commuter Lab at SMC!

What a long, strange trip it's been! We've survived three presidents (two and a half?), a new drinking age, and happy hour at the Door. We've written endless papers, often wondering why. Now, we have a fresh opportunity to teach others what we have spent the past several years learning. It has been claimed that life is the sum total of experience. If so, we have all experienced a much fuller life at St. Mary's than we might have experienced elsewhere. Keep on living.

While it is impossible to individually thank all of the people who helped on the yearbook, some extra special thanks are in order: to Lauren, for teaching me the ropes; to Rita B., for having a knack for business; to Dave R., for many hours in the darkroom; to Rita M., for consistently giving 110 percent even during finals week; and to all the people at ICP, especially Larry Lawson, for an extra dose of patience. I hope that you enjoy the memories captured in these pages as much as we enjoyed putting them there.

Jonathan Crawford, Editor
